

Great Chishill's very own action & adventure novelist Jonathan Crouch, has done it again, producing an action-packed sequel to his debut novel - Price: World, which was published last year.

Price: Polestarr continues the adventures of Dr Adam Price and his friends as they take on an American business tycoon, hell-bent on using his new, Polestarr satellite project, to secretly take over the World, under the guise of collecting the first real-time global warming data.

Price is first alerted to the threat when climatologist, Dr Wednesday Week visits his 'Chishill' home and reports her own studies cast grave doubt on the data being recorded by the Polestarr programme, but to what possible ends?

So begins the dangerous and life-threatening pursuit of the deadly truth, which culminates in a final showdown at the top of the World - the North Pole.

Price: Polestarr has already received 5-star reviews on Amazon and the series has been referred to as "what James Bond fans have been waiting for".

Once again, Jonathan draws on his own childhood in the cornfields, footpaths and orchards of Great Chishill, and the adventures he shared with his imaginary friend.

Jonathan says "I hope fans of the first novel will enjoy seeing their favourite characters in action again, plus the addition of some new faces, and of course a larger-than-life villain to be stopped!".

"The message of global warming is a central theme and it's perhaps fortunate timing, given the current political events in the United States, that the villain is an American tech giant, although the character and story line were written long before current events".

There's plenty of references to locations around the village, both from the ground and the air, which local residents will enjoy spotting.

Journalist Heather Lightly, his lifelong friend 'Mate' and AMIe - his virtual assistant, join in the adventure, under the ever-watchful eye of the Ministry.

The suggested reading age is from 12 years upwards.

Price: Polestarr is available to purchase from Amazon in both e-book and paperback versions, and readers are invited to keep up to date with future Price:World novels via the website: www.priceworldnovel.co.uk, where there are also links to the novels Facebook, YouTube and Instagram pages.